LECTURE ON LYING.

The following passage from a lecture delivered in Boston last week by Henry Giles, Esq., has at Erinian ardor combined with terseness (says the Boston Courier) which cannot fail to strike the reader, even if he be not prepared to admit the application to any one hereabouts:—
"Mr. Giles said:—"But then the Irish tell such lies-especially the needy Irish, and above all, the servant girls! What sinners and exceptions they must be in the midst of surrounding truth! How guilty they must be, with such brilliant examples always and everywhere before them of simplicity, sin-cerity, veracity and integrity! What severe conscientiousness in our parties and their leaders! How scrupulous our press! How full of probity our statesmen! How rigorously verity rules our orators! How genuine is all mercantile commodity, and how abhorrent of falsehood is the word of seller unto buyer! Of what unbending rectitude are all our moneyed corporations: how honorable and how like Cæsar's wife are all their MORE THAN ONE PRIZE TO EVERY TWO TICKETS. agents. And none of them ever run away with all the capital in their pocket. The man-servants and maid-servants that could be capable of a lie in such an age of truth are surely the most hardened of transgressors!
